

Thinking about your parent's homecoming

When you hear the news that a parent is coming home, it can be hard to think about anything else. Everyone in your family is probably very excited and making plans for how to celebrate. Will you have a cake? Will you go out for dinner? Will you have a party or just spend some quiet time with your family and close friends?

Sometimes people get so wrapped up in what they will do, that they forget to think about the important things they want to say.

On the signs below, write down the three most important things you want to say to your returning parent. Maybe you can make large signs that will say these things too!
