

It Will Help If You Understand More About Where Your Parent Will Be Stationed

Your parent may be deployed thousands of miles away, probably in a place that is very different than where you live now. Where will your parent live? What will he or she eat? What kind of people will your parent meet? These all may be questions you are asking.

If you learn more about where your parent will be deployed and what your parent will do each day, it may help you feel closer to him or her. But remember, sometimes parents can't be too specific about the places they are going or what they are doing for security reasons. For this reason, your parent may not be able to answer every one of your questions.

You can find out more about your parent's deployment just by asking. Here are some questions to ask and fill-in:

Q. How long will it take for you to get there?

A. _____

Q. What kind of food will you eat?

A. _____

Q. Will they have television where you are going?

A. _____

Q. Will you have a computer?

A. _____

Q. What will the weather be like?

A. _____

Write down three other questions you'd like to have answered. Remember that your parent may not be able to answer all of your questions.

Q. _____

A. _____

Q. _____

A. _____

Q. _____

A. _____